Dear Mr Beal,

I conveniently came in contact with your art (tchtchkes) and the condition of your charmless comedic concerns, ~~z~~ concerned moi. As a highly competent clown ~~i~~ considered it crucial to contribute a combination of chortlers and crafty corkers conceived to culminate in colossal chuckles, in contrast ~~to~~ to your current confused clumsy clunkers. Can you condescend to ~~cont~~ contemplate a casual collaboration with a consummate comedian? If so please send $5 to the above address for a custom collection of gags and wits written to win laughing fits.

Just joking,

Freddy Ferguson

Kyle,

I am pleased as punch (or happy as a clam if you prefer) that my hunch of your basic need to concede to my proposition and of your own volition to have me as a hired humorist, or casual co-partner has paid-off. And with speed indeed. I think it promises to be priceless, besides there are no cheap laffs. However, and not to be clever, but in all seriousness (no foalin), since you sent me $5 canuck bucks (and I might be a schmuck, but I'm not a loonie) I was only able to send $4.50 worth of whimsical words for you to work with. But this material would kill in the Catskills, so it should be able to fire up a Canadian Art gallery crowd. Or at least help heat up a room. Get the picture.

So without further ado here is a ($4.50) gaggle of gags sure to draw a guffaw for you to get through.

1. They say the average person ~~xxx~~ looks at an artwork for 30 seconds. I bet you can do it faster.
2. What do you get when you cross a artist and a lawyer?
A: Sunday painter
A: Art_torny
Another ass-hole
3. What do you call a failed artist?
Professor
A: picture framer
4. What do you call a artist run centre?
A: poor joke

Well that is what you get, just 1.12 a joke. Cheap. If all else fails just wear a clo wn nose.

Keep laughing and ~~xxx~~ send greenbacks next time.
